The GOP swept many of the nation's most closely contested contests, taking the governor's mansion in Virginia and the state legislature in Georgia. In North Carolina, the party was leading in some of the most competitive races but narrowly led one of the most closely watched contests. The GOP margins in these states indicate that the party's problems with voters are more a problem of image than substance, GOP strategists said. "It wasn't that Republicans were outpacing Democrats," said Democratic pollster Geoff Garin, in an interview earlier on Tuesday. "It's that they had the right people." The two-term governor is a Democrat. Virginia Senate race In Virginia, Republican candidates won
